My Portrait out of Nature

Have you heard the phrase "You are what you eat!"? What does your lunch box contain? Do you think that the food we eat represents us? We look into the artwork Lunch Break a series of four photographs belonging to British artist Sharon Lockhart. Her work focuses on the power of photography and the moving image and how there can be an impact on our daily everyday life. We create portraits with materials from nature such as leaves, twigs and pine cones.

Assembling the Pieces: Mosaic

Where were we born? In which cities did we live? Where are our parents from? Starting out with our roots that compose our identity and personality, we create a mosaic portrait reflecting our identity's different colours. Inspired from Spanish artist Pedro Mora's ceramics called Amber Smoot, we will explore the various identities emerging in big, cosmopolitan cities.

What Up with That Face!

Do you laugh on your own, are you surprised by what you do? What kind of expressions do we wear on our face when an unexpected turn of events happen? Influenced by Spanish artist Esther Ferrer's video installation Astonishment, Disdain, Pain and On and On, we explore and make sense of our different facial expressions using giant cardboards.

Moving Sculptures: Reality and Dream

Are you ready to make a photograph come to life? Based on British artist Sharon Lockhart's work Lunch Break we pose and move with each other to music and when the music is over we turn into still sculptures. We form our own mise-en-scene, and from our own perspectives we create large-sized papers on the floor. We talk about how our friends look differently, and cherish the wonderful differences.

We kindly ask you to come wearing comfortable clothes such as tracksuits, leggings, t-shirts and socks.

Where is My Mind?

What are your fears and passions? Based on the portrait of American artist Jean-Michel Basquiat who carried the street art spirit into his paintings, we focus on colors and mimics. Without thinking the physical and rational limitations, we work with easels on the canvas by blending different painting types with lines that will create our own way of expression. We bring our fears and our favorite topics together, creating our own portraits.

Play It: My Eye, My Mouth, My Brow, My Nose

Like the work in the Spanish artist Juan Navarro Baldeweg's series called Figures, we explore our feelings through masks. We work on facial expressions that help us discover our inner worlds and reflect on our emotions using modular geometric figures out of materials like eva, mat, styrofoam and brass fastener.

In this workshop, we will become familiar with Cindy Sherman's work who is known for her intricate disguises. We get to compose our own photo studio and crew. First, we decide the concept and the scenery and distribute the duties. We choose a participant as the photo-model and design eccentric outfits for her. We take the picture of our model and share it on our social media accounts!

Botanical Monoprint Workshop

For this monoprint workshop we get our inspiration from Spanish artist Curro Gonzalez's work The Milk Wood, a work that recalls a magical wood in which extraordinary creatures hide. Monoprint is a technique that depicts the application of design on a smooth surface with paint and its printing on paper. In this workshop, we learn the basic principles of monoprint by using plants, clipped papers in different shapes, and water based lino printing inks, and then we put it into practice.

Hear Me

Have you transformed portraits into characters by giving them a body, a space or a voice?

In this workshop we create a character and give it a voice, while shaping our characters with drawings in a collective working space, we search the unique voices for each character. In this search, we use the sounds of the objects in our environment, and we animate our characters by bringing their stories together with music and drama.

To organize this workshop a minimum of 8 people is required.

Geometric Faces

How much do you look like the people you live with? Do your features, like your eye color, clothes, hair resemble each other? Are they joyful and excited like you? In this exhibition, we study a series of portraits of British artist Gillian Wearing who poses as her close family members and as her younger self. We design little characters by bringing geometric cardboard shapes together. We talk about the differences and the similarities of the characters we created.

High School Parks of Future

Is there a park or a forest you always go to? What about your favourite spot in the park? Maybe under a tree or by a lakeside... Based upon Dutch photographer Rineke Dijkstra's Park Portraits, we think about the parks in which we exercise or spend time with our loved ones. We design our own green area, a parks from our dreams, and place it near our home .

Mobile Faces

Portrait is part of our smart phones now! We talk about how portraits used to be in old times and how contemporary artists view the portrait form. We channel our feelings and emotions onto cardboards and we talk and observe the portraits that everyone created; giving an opportunity to get to know one another better.

Characters In Cups

Artist Gillian Wearing says, "When we meet someone, all of us hold prejudiced ideas based on her physical appearance but we also know that the moment we get close, and talk to that person, these ideas would just evaporate." In this workshop, we play different roles, we draw intriguing portraits on cups and solve the mystery of a completely different character created with mask and makeup!
